Ferdose al-Taie is a former DOJ prosecutor and SEC senior counsel with more than 20 years of experience in white collar criminal defense, internal investigations, antitrust/competition law, SEC enforcement, government investigations, and corporate compliance.

A former Department of Justice (DOJ) prosecutor and senior counsel in the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) Division of Enforcement, Ferdose focuses her practice on white collar criminal defense, internal investigations, antitrust/competition law, SEC enforcement, government investigations, and corporate compliance. With the experience that more than 20 years of practice, 40 federal trials, and 10 years of federal prosecutorial service brings, many of Ferdose's most successful client engagements have not led to public charges and therefore remain confidential.

She brings a federal prosecutor's perspective to our clients' challenges to provide effective defense and compliance counseling designed to mitigate risk through practical application of fiscally efficient strategies. She represents companies and individuals in a variety of government investigations and enforcement actions, including matters involving allegations of antitrust violations, mergers and acquisitions, corporate misconduct under the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act (FCPA), whistleblower allegations (qui tam health care fraud and securities violations), federal equity receiverships, and cryptocurrency malfeasance.

During her five years at the DOJ, Ferdose served as a trial attorney in the Antitrust Division in the District of Columbia, a Special Assistant U.S. Attorney in the Eastern District of Virginia in Alexandria prosecuting criminal cases, and a civil Assistant U.S. Attorney in the District of Arizona in Phoenix.
