Thomas Kane represents clients in a broad range of complex litigation matters, with a focus on health care.

Thomas Kane is a shareholder in the Firm's Princeton office. He has extensive experience representing health care clients, including hospitals, physician groups, and individual providers in unfair competition, antitrust, contract, and reimbursement disputes. He also represents clients in the technology, finance, insurance, pharmaceutical, and retail services industries before federal and state courts at the trial and appellate levels, administrative bodies, and various arbitral forums.

Tom has extensive first- and second-chair trial experience in courts and arbitration proceedings throughout the country. He has particular experience in the development, trial preparation, trial presentation, and cross-examination of economic experts. He has utilized this experience on behalf of health care clients in a wide variety of provider-payor reimbursement, unfair competition, and breach of contract disputes.

Tom's recent practice highlights include second-chairing an arbitration proceeding that resulted in an award of over $110 million (including attorneys' fees) in a provider-payor dispute, successfully representing two New Jersey hospitals in unfair competition disputes over inter-hospital referral arrangements, and defending a Silicon Valley hardware component manufacturer in an international theft-of-trade-secrets claim.

Prior to attending law school, Tom was a legislative assistant to U.S. Representative Robert E. Andrews of New Jersey. Following law school, Tom clerked for The Honorable Thomas N. O'Neill, Jr., of the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.
